MINNESOTA STATE UNIVERSITY, MANKATO IS FEATURED IN THE PRINCETON REVIEW’S “BEST 290 BUSINESS SCHOOLS: 2008 EDITION”

Minnesota State University, Mankato is an outstanding business school, according to The Princeton Review. The New York-based education services company features the school in the just-published 2008 edition of its “Best 290 Business Schools.”

According to Robert Franek, Princeton Review VP-Publishing, "We chose schools for this book based on our high regard for their academic programs and offerings, institutional data we collect from the schools, and the candid opinions of students attending them who rate and report on their campus experiences at the schools. We are pleased to recommend Minnesota State University, Mankato to readers of our book and users of our website as one of the best institutions they could attend to earn an MBA."

“Best 290 Business Schools” has two-page profiles of the schools with write-ups on their academics, student life and admissions, plus ratings for their academics, selectivity and career placement services. In the profile on Minnesota State University, Mankato, students attending say "They love Mankato, Minnesota, The most attractive part of the program is the flexibility of the schedule accompanied by the teaching of course-work fundamentals, as well as, up-to-date problems and situations that are currently affect businesses today.” An Executive Lecture series gives students the opportunity to learn from and interact with top executives. Students report “the class sizes are great, and the level of feedback from the professors and from the other students' insights really makes a difference.”

Dr. Marilyn L. Fox and Dr. Kevin Elliott, Co-Directors of the MBA program, add that “the program emphasizes critical and strategic thinking, developing managerial skills, real-world applications, ethics, and leadership taught in a technologically – advanced, active learning environment.” They also indicate that “students feel well prepared to handle problems, situations, and changes that are currently affecting businesses today.”
